

NBI® Thinking Preference Assessments

Introduction to the full suite of NBI® neuroscience and psychology-based assessments

The NBI® Thinking Preference Assessments are a powerful suite of neuroscience-based psychological assessments. Based on modern insights from the fields of neuroscience, creativity and psychology, the assessments help individuals, leaders, teams and organizations unlock their full potential. The NBI® framework provides insights into left hemisphere (local processing), right hemisphere (global processing), cognitive and affective types of thinking. Such insights can lead to enhancement in the areas of social-emotional intelligence, self-awareness, creativity, leadership, communication, team performance, presentations, conflict resolution and more.

The assessments are completed online, take approximately 15-20 minutes to complete and are available through a licensed NBI® distributor or consultant. The assessments are the most extensive battery of thinking preference instruments available and include those for business, education, sports, relationships and more. A typical NBI® report is approximately 8 pages long and includes a four quadrant and eight dimensional visual display as well as pages of reading material customized to your results.
